

Proper Hashkafa found in other areas of life

Rabosai,

I know that some of us, including myself, are probably too concerned with what goes on in the sports world... however, while reading an article today about a particular NFL starting quarterback, the following was a quote from the QB himself in the article: "The long-term stuff, I don't worry about that, because if I worry about that stuff I'm going to forget about doing something today."

Hope everyone has a good, clean day.

nice!

but for us other nfc fans, let us hope that he does start thinking about long term ahead.

When I read that, I thought, boy doesn't that sound familiar?

Tosfos that's hilarious. Aren't they always saying let's take out one game at a time. Good advice! "Playoffs?!"

Yes, it definitely seems like they say that a lot... but the point is - and it looks to me like you get it already - that while it's not good to worry too much about what happens in the sports world in general, it is interesting to see that at least one of the main tenants that we have to hold by here has a parallel by them (or is it vice versa?).

The ultimate prize is winning the Super Bowl!

How do you do that?

By getting to the Super Bowl.

How do you do that?

By winning your playoff games.

How do you do that?

By getting to the playoffs.

How do you do that?

By winning your division (or wild card).

How do you do that?

By winning games.

How do you do that?

By winning today's game.

How do you do that?

By scoring more points than your opponent.

How do you do that?

By scoring right now (td, fg, etc.)

How do you do that?

By putting together a drive.

How do you do that?

By getting first downs.

How do you do that?

By converting this first down.

How do you do that?

By gaining positive yards....this very play.

It's all about this moment! Not the play before; not the play after this one.

This second...focus on making a positive play!

[Let the coach/God worry about the next play and the one afterwards; that's not your job!]
