

Starting now

Posted by decidingtotry - 20 Oct 2014 16:12

The longest I've gone recently is 2 days. I've been addicted to internet porn for probably over 15 years. Today I start to really try to break away. I know this won't be easy.

Thanks for the clarification, I'd never heard of the white book before.

there are those who believe that it descended from Heaven together with the manna.

Others have it on tradition that Queen Isabeela Emerald gave it to her husband, King Montezuma, after he was caught doin' bad stuff for the nineteenth time (in just under a period of three weeks).

three weeks is 21 days , so after 19 times (assuming one day at at time) , what did he do in the 2 days left ?

Baruch Hashem, I made it through a second day clean. Yesterday was a good day, I had two different chevrusas which really helped me keep my mind in the right place. When lustful thoughts pop into my head I'm trying to immediately stop them and distract myself. This morning was a little rough, I woke up and went right into the shower where the lustful thoughts came fast and furious. I couldn't daven to Hashem while in the bathroom, so I just keep repeating to myself stop, stop, stop, nope, nope, nope and then I'm not entitled to lust, I'm not entitled to lust. It worked in that I did not come anywhere close to falling. B'ezras Hashem I will make it through the rest of today also.

I'm not a posek, but imho, you can daven to Hashem - even in the shower.

Really? I was under the impression that you shouldn't think about Torah or Hashem in the bathroom. But what do I know?

hint-not much

You shouldn't masturbate or think about women inappropriately in the bathroom, either...

torah - you shouldn't.

Askin' God to help you keep your hands on the Zman magazine is fine.

generally that is true but sefer chasidim is matir to think divrey torah to save oneself from hirhurey aveira (mishna berura 85:13)

also Hashem is truly everywhere and the six constant mitzvos are constant, to be aware of His presence always everywhere vacm'l
