Great point. Great post. Simple though it is.

I'm not such a vet with sobriety/"staying clean" (yet!), but unfortunately I think that not feeling ecstasy and bliss is pretty normal.

I've heard Dov say about sobriety/"being clean" something like "I tasted integrity and I didn't want to go back.." I was thinking about this last Shabbos, 'cause I don't exactly feel like all my problems are gone by any means, but I do feel good about being sober/clean and being able to feel more respect for myself.

personality

I opted for something a little less intimidating. That Zuko is like, whoa man. Don't mess with him.

Don't think you should be feeling anything. Physical pleasure, lust, this world, it's all about instant feeling. What's the best feeling in the world? Years of discipline, practice, refinement. Then a moment of intimate peace, oneness with you and your God, as you sip your delicately bubbly lemonade as you rock, slowly, on the creaking chair on your balcony, glazed in the brilliance of the Pacific sunset.

Taste the victory.

thanks and singularity

thanks for the feedback guys. So just to make sure that we are on the same page I was talking about not feeling anything in staying clean for three weeks no excitement or something like that in fact I'm pretty lethargic about it (my wife said yesterday a few times that I lost my sense of humor she she was making a joke about something nothing to do with this)

I realize that I might be having with drawl from everything but I really don't think that I'm an addict (yeah yeah that's what they all say I know) thoughts anyone?

You might not be an addict.

Not everyone is an addict (okay Dov I said it, can you put your gun away now?)

But the 12 steps could benefit anyone (Please don't shoot me!)

With the clarification of your intentions when saying you don't feel anything, I still think my words have context.

I don't feel withdrawal, BH. Am I not an addict? I'd better tell my fellowship.

Thanks for getting back.

lol I get why you are scared of Dov but you should know I think in my case he will agree to US (if he wants to shoot you he has to shoot me first) true that the 12 steps can help anyone but I don't think I need them right now (Cordnoy please don't shoot me) and therefore can't find the time to go/call a meeting...

I think that I agree to you about the my feelings issue just wondering if it's normal would love to hear the opinion if others if there is what to add or a different look that I' missing

thanks
