Though it was not planned how appropriate for this to happen on Ta'anis Esther

?it helped me get in the mood of why we are fasting and to put aside the enthusiasm of Purim

Latest update here

Dude, you are doing this to yourself. Nobody asked you to leave.

This didn't "happen" to you. You are choosing to make an issue and leave.

I am willing to email with you individually or even talk...but you write:

"I am not comfortable with calling anyone to talk for real"

Many people on our group responded to your frustration the other day, to try to make you feel better and heard. You said it didn't help, because it wasn't a real connection. But then you say that you aren't comfortable with a real connection.

We (at least I) am here if you want.

The Fast of Esther actually was a show of amazing achdus...think about it.

I have never said any of that and you totally misconstrued/misinterpreted what I wrote.

Please do not bring these uncomfortable conversations on my thread or anywhere on the forum for that matter thanks for the understanding

I do not want to discuss this as of now but if YOU must you can email

Yosef,

Just a reminder that you used to ask people to talk nicely to you, not to lecture you, etc. your response sounds very critical and aggressive. I don't know what your conversation was about but I think especially for you who really demanded a high level of understanding and compassion, you should try to tone it down.

Your point is well taken, Workingguy.

I apologize, Mayan.

Perhaps I should have said nothing.

Perhaps I should have just emailed it.

Perhaps I should have been more clear what I meant.

I had NO intention of lecturing or upsetting you.

I think what made me post here was the tying it into the Fast of Esther, which I felt was hashkafically (don't know if this is a word) wrong.

This fast is about achdus. How everyone came together to avert the evil decree. Nobody said, fast on Pesach, are you crazy!

What about the mitzvah of eating matzah and drinking 4 cups of wine?!

No, everybody came together and fasted, and HaShem saw that achdus and saved us.

Mayan, you talk about how words can be misconstrued and misinterpreted.

I feel the EXACT same way right now.

I simply wanted to tell you that our whole group cares about you and still wants you to be part of the team. Nobody asked or expected that you would take the action you did to leave. And that if you wanted to talk, I am still here for you.
