Wasn't sure, thanks for clarifying. Then I have to say that you're pretty honest in that He's asking that from you. Good for you.

Oy vey, Life must be tough for you. Perhaps you would like to chat or you could email me at mesayinoisoi@gmail.com

I don't promise that I will help but I will listen.

People mistakenly think that they help by talking.

Because with a name like Trouble, he clearly isn't meant to be helpful. Trouble man, no offense, I love you dearly.

Listening is an art.

The poster said that he might not be able to help, but he will listen.

My point is that listening IS helping; sometimes even more than talking.

And if there is one thing I can accomplish here is that people shouldn't be so damn sensitive to what others write. Heck, it's anonymous; who exactly is causing you grief?

This just proves that when someone insults us we don't feel bad because of that person, we feel bad because we actually believe him and it bothers us, so it doesn't really matter who that person is.

Mr. Mesayin,

I'm not sure who, if anyone, you're directin' your comments at, but it seems to me that Mr trouble was complimentin' you or at least pointin' out a virtue of yours that you can listen - at least that's what you wrote.

And regardin' this last comment of yours, I'm not sure the meanin': if you believe somethin' that somebody writes, what is it about that person that bothers you? That he pointed out a defect of yours? You should thank him! Perhaps I'm readin' it wrong, but either way, please explain.

I know I am here to live a day of recovery, sobriety. I am not here to win awards, nor a popularity contest. So, if someone points out a possible defect of mine, kal hakavod! Bring it on please.

Sorry Cordnoy but it seems that you read my message with the wrong musical notes.

I'm not complaining, I greatly appreciate Trouble's compliment, at which point did I seem roughed up?

The issue about taking criticism or insults is a long story which I won't get into now. Unless you really want me to.
