

Going to do this

Posted by Meyer M. - 05 May 2020 13:12

was clean for 24 days, I never in my mind would've thought I would've been able to do it, I though I was going to be clean for a week at most and here we are at 3 weeks (24 days), unfortunately I fell but I'm looking forward to seeing what I can do next

Day 27: Clean

tbh my mind has been wandering to my girlfriend that I love, would this be considered healthy or is it something to be worked on as well? I think its healthy and desires are part of life but maybe im wrong?

I'm no bakee, but o recall hearing from an addict quoting the big book that they had no control over lust. It's great you love your girlfriend, and I'm sure it's good to think about and be concerned about her... Just make sure it's not lust, if it is then it's the exact thing on the screen your staying away from, don't say because she's real it's ok... Don't indulge yourself.

If nkt, then I rthink it would be fine, but only you can make that distinction.

Day 30: Clean!

Ok, quick recap of my last two months on GYE

Began on GYE: Had SSA thoughts. Lust was commonplace. Porn sites were a daily activity.
Discharged 3-4 times a day

End of Month 1: SSA gone down. Lust still prevalent but not as bad.

End of Month 2: SSA virtually gone. Lust still there but fading

In General: Discharges are down to once a month (by average). No longer am tired all the time (except when I go to sleep late), Strength has returned. Learned to walk looking down if I can't simply ignore and look away from a women. Am able to make rational calm decisions that have helped me. Needless to say porn sites are out the window.

Day 31: Clean.

I don't think there's any secrets here, everything I did is said in every shiur on these topics. The few key things that need you need have to do it though are willpower, restraint, and the actual desire to get out of this hole.

Listening to shiurim helps, training yourself to walk looking down (or in the very least look into the distance and ignore whatever is enticing you). Being busy is critical to avoid down periods where you can lose yourself (come onto GYE during those periods). Learning is a lifesaver.

From my view as a non-married working individual. Some days it's not possible to learn or to listen to a shiur, when you're driving a car you can't look down and away from sights. You will be down at some point or later. It's simply fighting the fight and not giving in. I will say Rabbbi Shafier's lecture (The Fight @ <https://theshmuz.com/series/the-fight/>) is a fundamental tool in this fight and is highly recommended, some books that were recommended to me by a rav go very deep into this topic and I wouldn't read them without a rav's say so. Other than that, idk, no secrets here

Mayer , you're a true inspiration! Keep it up...

If I may add one very important point:

The Talmud, tells us that a person's yezter hara (evil inclination) grows stronger and renews itself every day. And without Hashem's help, we are powerless to overcome it. (Kidushin 30b)

Will power alone is often not sufficient when dealing with these addictive behaviors. Not only that, but lust is so powerful that even the greatest Tzadikim who feared Hashem with all their hearts, sometimes felt powerless when faced head-on with lust. See what happened with Masya ben Charash and Rav Amram, Rabban Shel Chassidim. In both these cases, these great Tzadikim had to take extreme measures to ensure they didn't stumble.

100% agree. You always have to try to keep up with your doing. Even its it's too difficult. Do t get confident. We always have to know and understand that no matter at what point were at in the struggle, and whether it's eisoer at that time or not... We are always succceptable to another fall, there's always a part of us that still wants it. So you can never be too careful even after your well deserved success.

So so keep your head up high, pat yourself on the back, and keep up the great work.

Habe be a great Shabbos!,,!!
