

Hayom Yom

Posted by BHYY - 13 May 2020 03:20

Hayom Yom Rishon...

I'm not so great at writing all this out but you have to start somewhere. I've been struggling with watching and masturbating for years. B"H over the past couple of years I've made major improvement by speaking with a close Rebbe, chashuve members of GYE, and seeing a therapist. But I still have never made it to 90 days.

Today I start my journey to 90 and beyond.

Woke up with some sort of bug this morning and not feeling well at all. Just trying to get through the day clean.

"Just trying to get through the day clean" ??

That is no small thing... In fact that's what we try and need to do every day... ONE DAY AT A TIME!
Had some falls over Motzei YT and yesterday

Keep Strong, we need you.

Hi Getting married is not going to help the fight.

Today I actually spoke with Dov, and he told me that for some it could make it harder.

It all depends who you are.

If someone is addicted then when they are two weeks off it could be torture.

If your wife sees that you are into sex, she will back off and you will get no sex at all.

I've been there.

Its in the mind

Did I ever say it was?

I can tell you are very passionate about this and have posted similar things are on other peoples' threads but if you read my thread you will see that my frustration is because I want to go into marriage REWIRED. Hence:

I am b'chasdei Hashem working on this now before marriage but every time I fall I feel this intense fear that I'll mess up marriage by not getting over this.

Forgive me for jumping on you but you really need to read a thread before making a comment like that because it can come across as insulting. I've been fighting this fight for my marriage, whenever it happens.

R' Eyes I just t want to summarize what people are saying (on other threads too),

We all agree to you that marriage isn't the answer (usually, sometimes it is- let's not fight about that), I'm married, I can attest to that as well, but sometimes when saying that to an unmarried guy, who never said it will help, can be pretty insulting.

We know what you are trying to say pretty strongly (I'm assuming you felt otherwise before you were married and got messed up somewhat, so you feel the need to make sure it doesn't happen to anyone else), but please only say it when you are sure the person said otherwise, and even then you could write that for most it doesn't help...

I don't think you have to delete your post like last time lol, but just be more sensitive.

The sun was shining, the birds were chirping, and BHYY had a great day.

Seriously, it was beautiful outside.

I took HHM's advice to actually move and went on a brisk walk after Shacharis. Then I learned with my chavrusa did some errands and some more exercise and then had class. I feel so much better than I did yesterday. Exercise puts me in a much better mood and helps me deal with urges.

Yes, HHM is always right.

I'm having very strong urges to act out now. Oh well.

In my head I'm (Y"H?) is saying you barely have any time clean what's another fall? I know better than that. The journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step...

This is why I don't count days. I'll have a rough idea of how long I've been clean but otherwise I obsess over it, hello perfectionism. And if I fall, oh boy, gotta reset the counter so may as well go to town so long as on day 0. Yes, not counting is the only way I can focus on ODAAT.

I look forward to posting again before Shabbos that I'm still clean!

?I had some victories earlier today over urges but not all the way. I found myself home alone with all open access. B"H the zman starts next week so I'll be back in Yeshiva and not constantly exposed to unfiltered access.

I tried hard (not really my best) today. I exercised, I practiced mindfulness, I posted on GYE. The last thing I should have done was called someone on the phone. Then I probably wouldn't be posting about a fall now.

Shabbos was enjoyable, restful, and clean B"H.

I promised myself a nice afternoon if I stay clean through class. Here we go!

In regards to what people wrote about whether or not marriage helps, all I can add is my personal experience...and that is, yes it helped me. I used to masturbate and watch porn, plenty of it. But haven't done either of those not even once since I got married, over ten years ago. So what am I doing on this app?? Well I've posted some things on the baal habatim forum and the After an enjoyable 2 week hiatus I am back in my Sunday class responses have been extremely helpful to whatever I'm dealing with. So will marriage change how you think? No, and that's something that will need to be rewired and marriage will not help that. But the fact that I have not watched porn or masturbated once since I got married is not a coincidence. The last time I did that was about a week before my wedding.

Hi Chevra,

I am so happy to be back in Yeshiva! B"H I've been clean and enjoying the structure and social aspects. I haven't been on the site much as I'm focusing more on the physical people in my recovery (Phone calls, therapist, SMART meetings), I find they help me a lot more. Don't get me wrong, this site helps me a ton but nothing is like a real person (or people!).

Hope everyone is well, B"H I'm doing amazing!
