

Going up

Posted by yesoidshebiyisoid - 11 Oct 2023 22:58

Hi!

It's been a rough bein hazmanim (falling almost every day) and I decided to start 90 days for the second time. Last time I did just above 15, but I hope that with your support I will make it to day 90.

On this forum I will be writing about my struggle with P&M and the physical exercise I do which I find to be the most helpful strategy

Now I'm on day one; I'll let you know how tomorrow goes!

Did you try an accountability program?

Do you mean the partner thing?

Hi. Baruch Hashem I am still going strong and I'm on day five. (Doesn't happen too often.)

Does anybody have ideas of what to do as a self-reward for every five to ten days?

Ice cream or similar always worked for me.

It's been a while since I last posted. I made it up to 18 days (my personal record!) and then fell a few times. I got in touch with a partner and have spoken to Hashemhelpme. Now I am in day 7. I'm starting see that there is light at the end of the tunnel. !???? ???

Awesome! wow, it's amazing that you went 18 days, really shows that you care about changing. Great idea reaching out to HHM for guidance, keep it up and keep posting (I found that when I had a good streak I would get complacent and stop posting which resulted in a lack of focus and complacency which led to you-know-what). It's very normal to struggle especially around the 2-3 week period, so don't give up, now you have a new target to focus on and with Hashems help blow past. Keep marching forward towards the victory which will someday be yours. (besides for the many victories which you are having right now in the day to day)

Last night was tough, but thanks to HHM's instructions I Baruch Hashem made it through. Now I'm holding day 8.

Hatzlachah, there definitely is light at the end of the tunnel

Day by day, that's the way to do it my friend!

Keep it up we are all rooting for your success.

Try updating every single day, it could be a good means of accountability. Share your hardships & victories.

Hi. It's been a while. I figured that if posting has helped me before, I may as well continue.

This past bein hazmanim was actually the best one in a while, or even the best one yet. I fell about five times (compared to almost daily) and had a 14 streak within that time, something I've accomplished 2 or 3 times before.

Now I'm at day 3. I will continue posting ????? ? on a daily basis.
