Posted by Kedusha - 25 May 2009 20:03

Dear Guard: I have indeed been sending my progress e-mails to wallohonor@gmail.com.
Somehow, they are not getting through. So, instead, I will keep you posted from here.

I'll say he is! And, b'Ezras Hashem, I don't plan to let you (or myself) down.

Of course, I'm still waiting for someone to top my Mr. Magoo line! ;D

Kedusha wrote on 02 Jun 2009 04:08:

Bruce asked London: "What can you see in my posts that I should be grateful for?"

If I may weigh in: for starters, if pornography is difficult for you to avoid, you are, obviously, able to see; those who are blind don't face this particular test.

I have tried to remind myself that the Talmudic principle of Meegoo should apply here (albeit, not an exact application):

G-d doesn't owe us anything, and could have made us blind. G-d, therefore, has a Meegoo: since he could have made us blind, the least we can do is to avoid abusing the gift of sight.

Not to be too silly, but to remind ourselves of this Meegoo, why not post a picture of "Mr. Magoo" near our computers? en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mr. Magoo. No one will have a clue why it's there, but it can remind us that eyesight is a gift, and that none of us want to be like Mr.

Magoo, who won't ever be faced with the test of pornography.

Thank you, R. Guard.

I am logging on briefly to report first that, Boruch Hashem, I now have 21 days.

Also, I want to note what just happened. I was reading a perfectly innocent Wikipedia article, which had a completely inappropriate picture by one of the "classical artists." As soon as I realized that the picture was inappropriate (it took me a second or two, because it was completely unexpected), I closed out of the article. If I were to disclose which article it was, you would be amazed that temptation can be found even in such an article. I won't do so, however, so as not to tempt anyone to take a look!

Anyway, forewarned is forearmed. Wikipedia is great for looking up specific subjects, but it is not recommended for browsing through.

I wish everyone a wonderful day, where we appreciate the true beauty of the Ribbono Shel Olam's world, and experience none of the ugliness!

By the way, yesterday I had to remove a dead bird from my basement. It was quite unpleasant and disgusting. But the feelings of unpleasantness and disgust were short-lived, and I "recovered" pretty quickly. Compare this to when we, c"v, engage in disgusting behavior that affects our Neshama. In that case, the feelings of pain and disgust are much worse, and take much longer to go away. So next time anyone is tempted, just remember: you'd be far better off picking up a dead bird than giving into your temptation!

Reminds me of this story:

One of the previous Karlin Rebbe's was once served an expensive dish of cooked pigeon. When he felt Nimshach after the Taavah, he stopped himself and began to think about all the places the bird hung out, in garbage, in excrement. And he thought about the things the bird ate, worms, insects, until the Rebbe began to gag and pushed away the plate.

That's the idea behind the "last resort" tip on the "practical tips page" (the bottom of the page).

Kedusha, you have a great attitude and Hashem is helping you and giving you strength to get better and inspire us all!

Thank you, R. Guard, for the very kind words. Boruch Hashem, I am up to 22 days.

The last resort tips should, as the name implies, be used only as a last resort, as they may have unpleasant side effects. It's sort of like not taking prescription painkillers where regular Tylenol will do. That is why the Gemarrah in Brachos gives many suggestions for how to fight the y"h, but only as a last resort suggests remembering Yom HaMisa, which can bring a person to unhappiness or depression.

Bardichev,

Thank you for expanding on the Gemarah that I referred to in my post above (June 09, 2009, 11:16:17 AM). Your insight is an important one.
