Yeah, I commiserate w/you - I have very little wiggle room, too. And it's really a good thing, cuz it means Hashem (and sanity) with be front-and-center in my life.

Just like by krias yam suf. We cant forget about hashem. I we we forget we find the yam suf on our heads. Achris hayamim is the time that ain lanu lhishain ela al avinu shebashamayim. We cant make it even spirtually without him.

Aint that amazing!

anongye,

Sounds like you're doing really great. Chazak V'ematz! I believe those little slips are just Hashem's reminders to us to not get complacent. If we take the hints he won't have to hit us with a sledgehammer of a full-blown fall.

Its happened so often to me. I could be anywhere - then a thought pops into my head. "Hey, I wonder what would come up if I googled XYZ" Lo and behold i find myself in a trance getting to the computer as soon as i can and trying it out. Wouldn't you know, it leads straight to Gehinnom.

I'm thinking now that perhaps an incentive system would work. If i get through that day without searching for that word, the next day i can treat myself. So too the next day. By then I'll have hopefully returned enough to sanity to tell that thought where to get off.

Keep strong - with Hashem on our side, we can do anything!

AA

67 is awesome, but I'll take today over any number of days in the world!

Enjoy it.

I am not up to doing work and I am not up to learning and there is a computer in front of me.
Nevertheless, I will not slip and will try to pass through the last hour of work.
