

Been there done that... not really

I've started the teshuva process before, but never with the support of others. Even if no one is reading this, just the idea that I can post this somewhere is meaningful. One day at a time. So this is day 1. :-\

I think I need to check the attitude handbook.

Thank you RisingUp for your encouragement. That's so you shouldnt think that this is a thankless job. ;D

I actually had a pretty good day after all.

Many many times guys read posts w/o replying. As RisingUp wrote, keep track of the number views after you add a post. You will be surprised how many views each post gets!

I read these posts & almost didn't respond. ;D

I really should be asleep right now, but I got a phone call that pulled me out of bed. So I figured that it was also an opportunity to share with you all an amazing thing that happened. After I wrote my last post, I went to bed feeling pretty good about the day. Without even realizing it I started saying shema. Big deal, right? You have to understand, I have been forgetting to say Krias Shema al hamita for years. I've been kicking myself for years, to no avail. It certainly was not a habit of mine. But suddenly tonight it just came naturally. I'm blown away! Good night for real and thanks again!

than my email or the news. Sounds silly once its written out. But for me it's significant.

Thanks everyone for being there.

And hey... Be careful out there!

(sorry that's an old reference to when I was a teenager.)

Another glorious day!

I just wanted to say that if frum ladies or young women realized what their perfume does to people of the male persuasion, they would stop immediately. Breathing thru your mouth only for long periods of time isnt easy, but it helps!

Feeling good!

Good night everyone!

Hatzlacha Rabbah!

I'll tell you what I think of perfume - it's absolutely gross! >

And that line from your teenage years - I know the reference precisely!
