

Been there done that... not really

Posted by geshertzarmeod - 14 Feb 2011 09:48

I've started the teshuva process before, but never with the support of others. Even if no one is reading this, just the idea that I can post this somewhere is meaningful. One day at a time. So this is day 1. :-\

I think I need to check the attitude handbook.

OK there's gotta be something to this. I did very well while out of town. Im home now just a few days and the YH is burning inside of me. What gives?

Could it be that the kedusha of Eretz Yisrael brings with it an added challenge from the YH? ??
????? ??

Could it be that being back with my wife reignites the YH?

I would think the opposite, it should calm him down, no?

Maybe there's something about being back in the stressful situations of day to day life?

But I really didnt think that anything majorly stressful happened since Im back.

Can anyone shed some light on this phenomenon, or has nobody else experienced this?

I don't think it has anything to do with location. I have found that as soon as I start to feel good about myself, the YH takes it personally and ups his efforts. Weather this storm, and things should calm down a bit.

Hatzlocha!!

Reb Yid

I don't either think it's related to location.

There are going to be times when it gets really really tough.

It's okay to turn orange and green and fall on your head, as long as you stay sober. :o

WOW! KUTGW! Remember, more important than "counting the days", is "making the days count".

my avatar seems to have disappeared.

does anyone know if it would have anything to do with the fact that I gave back my laptop to the office and I erased all my stuff from it. or is it something else?

may be because you avatar is a link. maybe try downloading the image to your pc and then uploading it to your profile, not as a link.

wishing you much continued hatzlocha
